

CETRA Language Solutions Provides Interpreters for Ghana Navy Conference

Accra, Ghana, March 18, 2014 – CETRA Language Solutions, a leading, global language services company headquartered in the United States, provided interpretation services for the Coastal and Maritime Surveillance Conference which took place for the first time in Africa.

Anukware Adzima, General Manager of CETRA Ghana, Ltd, says: "It is an exciting time for us at CETRA to become a part of this all important conference."

The Coastal and Maritime Surveillance Conference was an official event of the Ghana Navy and took place in Accra, Ghana. The Conference brought together defense experts, maritime industries, Chiefs of Navy and Air Force, etc. The coastal and maritime surveillance is very important for Ghana, not only because of piracy threats and the protection of the offshore oil industry. The goal is to make Ghana the Centre of Maritime Security in West Africa. Unmanned aerial systems, coastal surveillance systems, anti-piracy and search and rescue are some of the topics that were discussed during the conference. As the conference was a multicultural event with a global topic, CETRA's interpreters facilitated communication for this event. CETRA collaborated with the IQPC, the organizer of the event and specialist in defense related conferences.

CETRA offers translation, website and software localization and interpretation services to the market research, legal, and life sciences industries as well as governments using a global network of professional linguists.
